We know these are difficult times for everyone, especially those of you who are serving patients. We hope you will enjoy these webinar series presentations featuring mental health and emotional wellness experts showing how you can reduce personal stress during the COVID-19 outbreak, as well as coping with other disasters. In addition to these hour-long webinars, we have made a series of mini-videos on related topics [1].

Available webinar series:

- Emotional Well-Being in 2021
Emotional Well-Being in 2021 Webinar Series

By popular demand, we are launching a second series of webinars based on last year’s Emotional Well-Being During the COVID-19 Crisis for Health Care Providers series. As before, these sessions will be moderated by Vice Chair for Adult Psychology Elissa Epel, PhD [4], and feature experts sharing insights on how we can reduce stress and trauma in our health care systems and communities during the COVID-19 outbreak and other crises. We will also be updating the UCSF Coping Resources website as we travel together through this year and identify unmet needs.

This webinar series is co-sponsored by the UCSF Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences [5] and UCSF Office of Alumni Relations [6] with support from John McCoy and Nicholas Roznovsky.

April 15 - Building Institutional and Personal Resilience

WATCH A RECORDING OF THIS PRESENTATION [7]

August 5 - Well-Being of Youth and Young Adults

!Speakers
Parenting and educating young people as they transition back to in-person learning and jobs this year will likely be both joyful and challenging. A panel of experts will discuss approaches that parents, caregivers, and educators can take to support youth, including strategies to promote resilience, resourcefulness, and creating environments that facilitate a sense of belonging and agency—especially for youth of color. They will also discuss the risks of excessive pressure to succeed and countering helicopter parenting, as well as ways that schools can implement trauma-informed, equity-promoting approaches that foster wellness and healing justice.

Resources

- Book by Julie Lythcott-Haims: “How to Raise an Adult” [67]

- Julie Lythcott-Haims’ Four Parenting Tips to Raise an Adult [68]

- Dan Siegel’s books on parenting [69]

- UCSF HEARTS (Healthy Environments and Response to Trauma in Schools) [70]

- Article on UCSF HEARTS from the book “Assessing and Treating Youth Exposed to Traumatic Stress” [71]

The climate crisis is impacting health, and health care professionals have a pivotal role as advocates for change. The climate crisis must be mitigated by vast reductions in carbon use, including by the medical industry, which is responsible for 8% of global greenhouse gas emissions. Physicians will share how they have promoted advocacy, as well as effective ways of messaging, and how leaders serve as trusted sources of information, educators for policymakers and local institutions, and change agents in their own institutional or governments policies. Healthcare professionals and others can help move the public and leaders from distress into active roles that will have reverberating impacts on our societal change. This session will end with a meditation.

This webinar is co-sponsored by the UCSF Center for Climate, Health and Equity and the UCSF Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences Climate Crisis and Mental Health Task Force. A workshop on advocacy training will be announced during this session.
